Greenbelt Hosts Popular National Night Out Events

by Lynn White

This has been a tumultuous year for law enforcement across the country. This didn't dampen the spirits of police officers or residents at Greenbelt's annual celebration of National Night Out on August 2. The series of community events were an excellent opportunity to build bridges between law enforcement and the community.

According to Greenbelt's website "National Night Out is a cohesive effort to promote involvement in crime prevention activities, police-community partnerships, neighborhood camaraderie and a message to criminals letting them know that neighborhoods are organized and fighting back." Beginning in 1984, National Night Out is celebrated nationwide on the first Tuesday in August. Councilmember Leta Mach said that "getting the police and community together is even more important this year than in years past."

Play Bingo, Donate Food For Local Food Pantry

by Calvin Chao

Have a cupboard clearout of non-perishable food items and bring them down to the Ladies of Charity (LOC) Bingo Nights at the Labor Day Festival on September 2, 3 and 4. While there, sit down at a table in the open space near the Community Center and have a fun night of bingo. This is one of the LOC's largest fundraising events, where half of the bingo game monies will go to help fulfill the mission of assisting those in need in Greenbelt and half go to the bingo winners. There will be a bin at the bingo site to collect non-perishable items for the food pantry.

LOC has helped members of the Greenbelt community undergoing difficult times by providing food and a one-time assistance for rent or utilities. They coordinate the St. Hugh Food Pantry that provides breakfasts, lunches and dinners in grocery-size bags to 15 families each week. These families are referred by local organizations in Greenbelt.

Formed in France in the 17th century, LOC is the world's oldest faith-based volunteer group.

Not All Greenbelt Station Kids Can Enroll in Greenbelt Schools

by Kathleen Gallagher

It was not exactly a lion's den that Johndel Jones-Brown walked into on the evening of August 3, but if there is one subject about which the city council historically takes on the nature of a big momma cat defending its cubs, it's the time-honored understanding the city has had with the county that Greenbelt children will be eligible to attend neighborhood schools within the city.

At a council meeting with Prince George's County Public Schools (PGCPS) CEO Kevin Maxwell in February, Councilmember Leta Mach reported that children living in the still-developing area of Greenbelt Station would be assigned to Berwyn Heights Elementary School, Greenbelt Middle School and Parkdale High School. In response to councilmembers' objections to the elementary and high school assignments, Maxwell replied that as a county system, PGCPS cannot always place students at schools within their municipality.

That statement appears to stand in contradiction to action taken by the Prince George's County Council in May 2004, when county bill CB-33-2004 included assurance to both the City of Greenbelt and the City of Bowie that the county school system would do exactly that.

Maxwell offered to arrange a meeting with representatives of the PGCPS Office of Pupil Accounting and School Boundaries to explain how boundaries are established. Jones-Brown, who is the director of that office, attended last week's meeting to continue the discussion. Greenbelt's school board representative, Lupi Grady, was asked to attend the meeting but declined due to a conflict.

Mayor Emmett Jordan opened the meeting by noting that the city's emphasis on having its young people attend schools within the city was not just a wish but rather had been an understanding between Greenbelt and the county at the time when an addition scheduled for Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) was reassigned. Before pursuing that, he asked if Jones-Brown would like to give an overview of the current enrollment situation.

Jones-Brown said for a time the impression had been that enrollments were declining, but it was then realized that those changes were geocentric, with different patterns emerging in the northern, central and southern parts of the county. In the northern part of the county, there has been growth that is expected to continue. Among other obvious problems, growth is an impediment to introducing new programs. For example, there is high interest in expanding pre-kindergarten programs, but the school system does not have the seats to do so.

"We have a reduced ability to accommodate all the goals we have," he said. "We work to meet as many goals as possible." He added that they were not expecting any dramatic changes in the next couple of years. For pre-kindergarten, they are even looking off-site for space.

Jordan described the city council as being "shocked" when it heard of the Berwyn Heights and Parkdale assignments since the development of Greenbelt Station marks the first real population growth in the city for many years. Considering that the city believes the nature of this development is unlikely to result in a significant population of children, he asked if it was unreasonable to think there might be a way to accommodate these families and what the process for doing so might be.

Jones-Brown replied that the process differs depending on whether boundaries are already in place and would have to be changed or whether boundaries need to be assigned to previously undeveloped areas that are approaching occupancy. For the latter, he described the process that the county planning office goes through in anticipating facilities and needs. School assignments are not made until PGCPS is notified that new street names and house numbers are coming on line.

Mach said she fully appreciated the overcrowding issues the county has to deal with, but in this instance, the Greenbelt

About the Legislation

According to minutes of city council meetings, the development of the "agreement" with the county started in February 2004, when the city council learned from its then County Councilmember Douglas Peters that, according to the new capital projects budget for the schools, a planned addition for Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) was to be eliminated, with an addition instead being provided to DuVal High School. Boundary changes were also to occur.

Initially the city council opposed that plan but by April of that year voted to establish a memorandum of understanding (MOU) with the School Board and Peters that included Greenbelt's support for the DuVal addition.

As drafted by the city, other provisions included: that Greenbelt's school boundaries

Greenbelt's Peace Cranes

by Elizabeth Gaines

Peace cranes mark the anniversary of the bombing of Hiroshima.

Saturday, August 6 marked the 71st anniversary of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima. The paper cranes hanging at Greenbelt's memorial symbolize peace. Sadako Sasaki, a Hiroshima schoolchild was sickened by bomb-caused leukemia. She tried to fold 1000 paper cranes as, according to Japanese legend, she would get a wish. She died in 1955. At her Hiroshima's Peace Park monument the base reads, "This is our cry. This is our prayer. Peace on Earth."

The memorial park is located between the library and the Braden Field tennis courts.

UM Shuttle Could Be Useful to More

The city has been running ads for renewing University of Maryland shuttle passes, but that wording might be confusing to potential first-time purchasers. For the price of a pass, any Greenbelt resident or employee may ride any of the University's shuttle routes for one school year. With identification, these passes may be purchased at the Aquatic & Fitness Center, the Youth Center and Springhill Lake Recreation Center. Buying now gives the rider the benefit of one full year as the new passes expire August 28, 2017. New passes must be bought each year.

Residents should know that Shuttle-UM may not be the best option for regular transportation to a job, school, etcetera, because the routes change every spring, summer and fall, with reduced service in summer and no service during short school breaks. Sometimes the routes change dramatically; for instance, this summer the Greenbelt Route 143 began going both directions on Ridge Road as opposed to the previous one-direction loop. It is up to a rider to pay attention to route and schedule changes via the website transportation.umd.edu/schedules.html (anyone who doesn't have a computer or internet access can use the library's computers for free).

Even with its limits, I have found the shuttle to be a very useful, inexpensive transportation option that might be worthwhile to more Greenbelters.

Enjoying the Green Themed Paper

This week I was pleasantly surprised to find the Greenbelt News Review paper reporting on the city's efforts to promote keeping things green. Beginning with the story about Henry Jochem and his farm fresh produce hand grown with no chemicals and collected rainwater, and eggs hatched by pasture raised chickens, to the adjacent article reporting on the efforts of volunteers young and old removing invasive plants from the Greenbelt area, recycling guitar strings at the Music and Arts store, the TapIt program, an upcoming conservation day at the Patuxent Research Refuge and finally the nature pictures and my recent submission to the paper, Ecologically Friendly Greenbelt, the results of keeping things green.

While we are on the subject of keeping things green, the article about recycling guitar strings reminded me of something I see on my almost daily walk around the lake: pieces of fishing line. I would like to suggest the city consider installing PVC fishing line receptacles on the doggie bag poles and one on the peninsula to keep discarded fishing line from being ingested and tangled around animals.

In addition, the city should also consider upgrading the water fountain on the trail to accommodate a TapIt station for the many patrons who walk and run around the lake; many don't access the water fountains near the playground.

Just a friendly reminder to those who fish and carry in food and bottles, please carry out and properly dispose of waste; it is unsightly and harmful to animals.

Indignation

Indignation is a coming-of-age story which depicts hyper-intelligent, sexually naive, young Jewish atheist Marcus Messner (Logan Lerman) fleeing from his smothering kosher butcher father in Newark, New Jersey to the pastoral campus of Winesburg College in Ohio in 1951.

Tightly wrapped Logan, a devotee of Bertrand Russell, debates religious issues with priggish Dean Cauldwell (Tracy Letts), who insists Logan attend regular chapel services.

Logan is thoroughly confused by and attracted to the sexually generous blonde, shiksa co-ed Olivia Hutton (Sarah Gadon). Beneath her sophisticated allure, however, lie darker truths, which lead to a stunning twist at the end.

A beautifully photographed period piece, Indignation, based on Philip Roth's novel of the same title, is written and directed by James Schamus at a slow, measured pace where each word and scene count.

Reel and Meal At the New Deal

The Impact of Gun Violence in America is the focus of the August 15 Reel and Meal film in the 2016 documentary Making a Killing, which will be shown at the New Deal Café, in Greenbelt's Roosevelt Center. The free film starts at 7 p.m., following a vegan buffet served from 6:30 p.m. There is a charge for the buffet.

The film espousing an anti-gun viewpoint intersperses emotional stories of gun violence: accidental deaths from guns not stored safely; the impact of gun trafficking across state borders and mass shootings and proposes solutions such as background checks and smart guns that can only be fired by their owners, among other possibilities.

The Reel and Meal at the New Deal film series is a collaboration of three Greenbelt affinity groups who have shown films at the New Deal Café for the past nine years: Green Vegan Networking, Beaverdam Creek Watershed Watch Group and the Prince George's County Peace and Justice Coalition, which planned this month's documentary.

Remembrance of Barbara O. Cassidy

by James Cassidy

Barbara Cassidy died from cancer on July 15, 2016, at the Arbor Terrace in Lanham, Md. She was 85. We moved from North Carolina to Greenbelt on January 1, 1988.

She was born in Chelm-Lubelski, Poland, to Cyprian Odorkiewicz and Eugenia Prost. When she was four, her father accepted a position at the Warsaw Water Works. The family lived in Warsaw until the Polish uprising in August 1944. When the German Army occupied this city in 1939, the lack of food, coal, radios and schools followed. Many schools became hospitals for wounded German soldiers. Jews were taken by train out of Warsaw to do slave labor or to be cremated. During the uprising, Barbara, her sister and their mother were transported in a cattle car to Germany to harvest potatoes.

When the war ended in 1945, they were in the American zone. Cyprian Odorkiewicz located his wife and two daughters and found work with the Americans. Barbara attended a Polish Gymnasium for refugees and studied German. Because of Cyprian's activity in the 1944 Uprising as an officer in the Polish underground army, he could not go back to Poland. The family went to Paris in 1947, where she attended Lycée Marie Curie and then the University of Paris, Faculty of Science (the Sorbonne), and received a B.S. in chemistry. She also studied English and Italian, to become a linguist like her father. In the fall of 1953 she went to the University of London to study for her master of science in biochemistry.

She left England in the winter of 1954 to immigrate to the USA. Her father worked for Radio Free Europe and his office was being moved to New York City. She worked for a small company for three years and then for a large chemical company, American Cyanamid, as a literature scientist. This is where she met her future husband, James E. Cassidy, who had just obtained his doctorate in chemistry from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. I had some questions about her translation of an Italian chemical paper. We found that we had similar interests – classical music, opera, ballet, theater, history of art, museums and travel. My courtship covered all these activities and we married in June 1959 in a small country church in Connecticut.

She worked at American Cyanamid until the birth of our first son in 1961. She then became a freelance translator of scientific papers in German, Italian and French to English. She was a substitute French teacher in the local high school and organized outings to art events in New York City. In 1964 I accepted a research position with Geigy, a Swiss company. A second son was born in 1965.

In 1972 Geigy merged with Ciba. In 1973 its agricultural division was moved to North Carolina. My career bloomed there. We lived there for 14 years. On January 1, 1988 we moved to the D.C. area so I could work about 30 hours per week for JSC on K Street doing laboratory work by contracting projects to research laboratories located in the U.S. Our two sons had careers of their own and have moved often.

She liked living in Greenbelt for 28 years. She could walk to areas for daily living needs and take Metro for culture. We could do things that we did when I courted her in our youth. Of all the areas she lived in the USA, she liked the D.C. area the most. We traveled often in the period of 1988 to 2001. This July we talked about things we did together with and without our sons. They found their own drummers, they love their work and they have good incomes. We have six grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. Barbara has a younger sister who lives in White Plains, New York.

Our 57 years of marriage was a great run. Many vacations in North America and Europe, many cultural events, and the lives of our two sons and their families were the backbone of our marriage. Careers, travels and art are important, but two sons, their wives and children give an important element to our marriage – human joy and love.

On August 1 Barbara's ashes were buried in my family plot in Oak Grove Cemetery in Springfield, Mass. On August 2 a memorial dinner for Barbara was held at Collington in Mitchellville for friends and a cousin who lives in the D.C. area. All of them have interacted with her from January 1988 to July 2016.

Condolences to James Cassidy on the death of his wife Barbara Cassidy on July 15, 2016.

Used Books Sought for Labor Day Sale

Good news for those whose bookshelves are overflowing: during August the Greenbelt Elementary School PTA will collect used books to sell at its used book sale at the Labor Day Festival.

Book donations may be dropped off at the Co-op Supermarket or Greenbriar condos no later than Wednesday, August 31. At-home pickup for large donations within the 20770 zip code can be arranged; leave a message at 956-639-6434. Large donations are tax deductible; just ask for a receipt.

It is easiest for the PTA to handle boxed books packed spine side up and sorted by fiction or nonfiction. DVDs, CDs, books on tape, records, games and puzzles are also accepted. The book sale does not take encyclopedia sets, dictionaries, phone books, newspapers or magazines. As of 2016 the sale will no longer accept VHS tapes or music cassettes.

Money raised through the book sale is used by the PTA to support school events, arts, music and science programs, for teacher appreciation and student rewards and to purchase needed items.

schools are no more crowded than the schools to which the Greenbelt Station students would be assigned. So why not assign them to the closer schools? What is achieved by sending them elsewhere?

In the case of the high schools, Mach said, ERHS and Parkdale are both 15.8 percent overcrowded, so why not send the students to ERHS? In the case of the elementary schools, she recognized that Springhill Lake Elementary was seriously overcrowded, but Greenbelt Elementary is actually less overcrowded than Berwyn Heights Elementary: 9 versus 11 percent. "Why not keep them in Greenbelt?" she asked. She also pointed out that as many as 3,000 students have attended ERHS in the past and that the current 2,500 is relatively low in comparison.

Jones-Brown appreciated Mach's point but said those numbers might need to be examined in a different way since the "state-rated capacity" of the schools is determined by the state, not the county. It does not, for example, include the capacity of "temporaries" that may be in use on the property.

Councilmembers spoke of the benefits of a cohesive community, where young people attend their neighborhood schools. In Greenbelt's case, the city contributes to its schools as well, in terms not only of advocacy but also a grant program administered by the Greenbelt Advisory Committee on Education, two college scholarships for students at ERHS and recognitions of both students and teachers throughout the year, among other programs. Since some of these activities are taxpayer-funded, students who are residents of Greenbelt but attend school elsewhere would be put at a disadvantage.

Nor is the concern based primarily on distance. Driving distance to Parkdale High School is only 0.2 miles more than to ERHS from Greenbelt Station. Berwyn Heights Elementary is only 1.2 miles from Greenbelt Station, while Greenbelt Elementary is 3.1 miles.

Returning to the subject of the agreement, Councilmember Judith Davis said that Greenbelt had supported an addition to DuVal High School rather than to ERHS on the understanding that Greenbelt students could attend ERHS. She said she had it on good authority that there are quite a few students enrolled at ERHS who have Lanham addresses. She asked why students from Lanham could not be assigned to DuVal.

Jones-Brown clarified that his office is only advisory to the CEO and the Board of Education in matters that would involve changing assignments that are already established. They can make recommendations for changes but the authority to make the changes lies with the board and the CEO. He added that often the board will decline to disrupt well-functioning schools to make adjustments affecting even a relatively small number of students.

Councilmember Konrad Herring said his understanding was that new residents had been told their children would go to schools in Greenbelt. He questioned whether the needs of municipalities were being served well relative to unincorporated areas.

Mach brought the topic back to the understanding Greenbelt had with the county. She said it appeared that the county office was not aware of this requirement and that the reassessments might simply be a mistake. She asked Jones-Brown if this information could make a difference. He replied that it might be a factor for consideration but said since he had not seen any agreement and was not familiar with its conditions or whether it continued to be in force, he could not respond specifically.

Davis expressed frustration, saying the council had been "getting a run-around" from the county on the issue, with the result that a good deal of time had passed. They had asked the city's school board member to look into it over a year ago but had received no response. In the January meeting, where council brought the matter to the CEO's attention, they were given the impression that it was Jones-Brown's office that could assist. Now they were being directed to participate in public forums to raise issues for consideration for the following year.

In addition to the immediate issue of the assignment of the students, Davis said that although the city would be aware of its own new development, it received no notice regarding the school system's intended assignments, with the result that there was no opportunity for the city to respond before actions were taken.

"We got it by hearsay," said Davis. "Municipalities need to know that they can expect no notice."

Councilmember Silke Pope expressed support for the public forums held by the school system to get public opinion. The problem, she said, in the case of new development and new residents is that they are not on site yet to participate in public forums when their homes are being assigned to school districts. At this point in the process it is essential to invite, notify and involve the municipality.

Councilmember Rodney Roberts observed that since school assignments are triggered by designated house/street addresses and since much of Greenbelt Station may not yet have those addresses, perhaps the city could still make a request on assigning those residences to Greenbelt schools. Jones-Brown said the city could try that, as well as ask at the same time to revisit those already assigned. He described this as a "decision point," saying intervention on new residences coming on line might be possible.

Council expressed its appreciation to Jones-Brown for attending the meeting and for his patience with the questions and for being straightforward in his answers.

would be drawn and maintained such that all Greenbelt children could attend Greenbelt schools and all high-school-aged children living within the city boundaries could attend ERHS both then and in the future; that special programs at ERHS would be protected, even if student numbers declined; a reduction in student to teacher ratio if student numbers declined; and a condition that if student numbers rose enough to require the use of "temporaries" in the future, ERHS would immediately be placed back on the Capital Improvement Program list for permanent additions.

That was what the city wanted to do, but by June word came back from Peters that an MOU would not be a feasible vehicle to use. Instead he said he would add language to the school system capital budget, which appeared in CB-33-2004, the county's FY 2005 appropriations ordinance.

CB-33-2004

The bill adopted by the county council followed the Greenbelt wording fairly closely but not exactly. It said the Board of Education would structure its school attendance boundaries in the Greenbelt area to provide that:

Rising Stars Showcase Seeks Performers

by Margaret Stricklett

The Greenbelt Rising Stars Performance Showcase will take place on the outdoor stage of Roosevelt Center on Sunday, September 4 from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m. as part of the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival 2016.

This program is an opportunity for performers age 17 years or younger to share their creativity, their art and maybe what they learned this summer by singing, playing an instrument, performing a musical scene, juggling and more. Kids and teens may perform alone or get with friends and form a group show. High school bands and drama groups, church and private youth bands and choirs are welcome. The outdoor stage will be ready with a sound technician and full sound equipment. Rising Stars Performance Showcase is the perfect time for soloists, groups and bands to practice songs and audition material for future events in front of a live audience. It is also a good way to become better known to the community.

For younger performers, Rising Stars Performance Showcase is a great place to feel supported while they create. Because Rising Stars is not a competition, but low-key, family fun, young people can explore their various creative talents in a sharing atmosphere. Each participant will also have a trophy to bring home to remind them of their experience.

All participants must register. Go to the Greenbelt Labor Day website at greenbeltlaborday.com and follow the quick link to Rising Stars Performance Showcase.

To discuss a performance or ask questions, contact astricklett@yahoo.com or phone 301-474-6406.

Refuge Celebrates Conservation Day

The Patuxent Research Refuge will celebrate Wildlife Conservation Day on Saturday, August 13 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the North Tract. The public is invited to take guided hikes; learn tips on birding, wildlife photography and observation; practice fly tying and fishing; see raptors and other live birds; watch working dogs retrieve; participate in archery and firearms demonstrations; and engage in crafts for younger children. There will also be information about hunter safety, accessible hunting and fishing and other conservation and recreational opportunities in the area. Exhibitors will include the Meade Natural Heritage Association, the National Wild Turkey Federation, Trout Unlimited, Wings Over America and others.

According to Refuge Manager Brad Knudsen, "Conservation Day celebrates all wildlife conservation efforts and especially the contributions of hunters and anglers in conserving our natural habitats and wildlife resources. The vast lands that make up the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's National Wildlife Refuge System provide not only habitats for wildlife but also opportunities for people to enjoy wildlife-related recreational activities such as wildlife observation and photography, bird watching, hunting, fishing and interpretive and educational programs. We hope people in the Baltimore/Washington metropolitan area will take advantage of the opportunities provided by Patuxent and other wildlife refuges in the area."

With Erickson Living since 1995, Hibbs has most recently served as the executive director of Oak Crest, a sister community located in northeastern Baltimore County.

stated Chip Warner, vice president of regional operations for Erickson Living. "His professional life has been dedicated to not only serving the residents of Erickson Living but also advocating for older adults across the nation. Riderwood will continue to thrive as a place where our residents live better lives, in part because of Gary's dedication to our mission."

At Erickson Living, Hibbs has also been a regional executive director and executive director of communities in Michigan and New Jersey. Previously, he served as administrator of Wellington Manor, a long-term care facility in Clinton.

Hibbs has worked with adults in both local and national arenas, having served with the Area Agency on Aging in Montgomery and Prince George's counties and the Senior Citizens Law Project. He also worked with Congressman Claude Pepper as a staff

The Greenbelt branch was founded shortly after St. Hugh of Grenoble Catholic Church was completed approximately 60 years ago. Since the local chapter in Greenbelt has been in existence, they have helped many families in need. The LOC received one of the first grants given by the Greenbelt Community Foundation (GCF), enabling it to continue fulfilling its mission of serving the community.

The organization receives a handful of calls every week. These calls are then prioritized in order to make the biggest impact in the community. The LOC often pairs up with other community organizations such as American Legion, Greenbelt CARES, Greenbelt Interfaith Leadership Association (GILA) and the Elks Club to provide assistance to residents of Greenbelt.

The Ladies of Charity is also the beneficiary of local food drives organized by such groups as the Boy Scouts who collect non-perishable food items in Greenbelt neighborhoods annually. A new program just started at the Greenbelt Co-op grocery store. It provides shoppers the opportunity to donate $5 for a pre-packaged bag (value $5.79) of six non-perishable food items that are donated to the St. Hugh's Food Pantry.

The Greenbelt Community Foundation is highlighting the Ladies of Charity Food Bank at its Labor Day Festival Information table on Saturday, September

3 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Citizens can enter a free drawing for prizes. This is one of 14 events in the foundation's 10th anniversary awareness campaign, Explore Your Greenbelt, running from April to October. The Greenbelt News Review, Beltway Plaza and Paradyne Management are sponsors of the campaign. For more information go to greenbeltfoundation.net.

Officers Assist Shooting Victim

by George Mathews

On Saturday, August 6 at approximately 11:53 p.m., Greenbelt officers backed up a Berwyn Heights police officer on a traffic stop on Greenbelt Road in the area of Edmonston Road. The vehicle was stopped for erratic driving. The driver stated that he had just been shot in the parking lot in the 6100 block Springhill Drive. The victim had what appeared to be a gunshot wound to the mouth.

Investigation revealed that the victim, a 24-year-old Greenbelt resident, was on foot in the parking lot when he was approached by the suspect. The suspect demanded the victim's jewelry. The victim refused, at which time the suspect produced a handgun and fired a shot toward the ground. The victim then gave the suspect his jewelry. The suspect then fired multiple shots at the victim, striking him once in the face. The suspect fled the scene on foot in an unknown direction, with the victim getting into his vehicle and driving away. The victim was transported to Prince George's Hospital Center for treatment of non-life-threatening injuries.

The suspect is described as a black male in his twenties, approximately 5'7" tall, 160 pounds, with close-cropped black hair, wearing a gray or dark-colored shirt.

George Mathews is the Greenbelt Police Department public information liaison.

Get Ready for School Elementary Orientation

Greenbelt Elementary, Magnolia Elementary and Springhill Lake Elementary invite parents to prepare for the new school year.

Reading Readiness

Greenbelt Elementary kindergarteners who did not attend the school's Pre-K program need to come to the school for readiness assessments. These assessments are offered through the second week of August. Call 301-513-5911 to schedule an appointment.

Orientation

Greenbelt Elementary will offer orientation on Thursday, August 18 at 2 p.m. in the Multipurpose Room. Parents can learn about school programs. Pre-kindergarten, kindergarten and new students can get to know their new school, teachers and classmates.

Magnolia Elementary will also hold orientation on August 18. Pre-K students are expected from 10 to 11 a.m. Kindergarten students will meet from 1 to 2 p.m.

Springhill Lake Elementary School is planning an open house for August 18. Students and families are invited to the school from 9 to 11 a.m.

Vaccinations

In Maryland, students must be immunized. The schools urge parents to make sure student vaccines are up to date and the paperwork is in order.

GHI Gets New Siding

Alert Greenbelt residents will have noticed the spruced-up look appearing gradually throughout the north end of town as GHI frame houses get new siding. Pleasant and harmonious neutral tones of a slightly narrower siding are offset by slightly broader white trim reminiscent of New England.

As far as a casual observer can tell, it appears that crews are working neatly and not leaving a lot of debris and destruction behind them as they move steadily from one building to the next.

New Online High School Diploma Program at Library

The Prince George's County Memorial Library System is offering qualified community members the opportunity to earn an accredited high school diploma and credentialed career certificate through Career Online High School, a program brought to public libraries by Gale, a part of Cengage Learning. Part of the world's first accredited, private online school district, Career Online High School is specifically designed to reengage adults into the education system and prepare them for entry into post-secondary career education or the workforce.

The library system will award scholarships for Career Online High School to qualified learners looking to earn a high school diploma and advance their careers. Once enrolled, Career Online

High School pairs each student with an academic coach, who assists with developing an individual career plan, offers ongoing guidance and encouragement, evaluates performance, and connects the learner with the resources needed to demonstrate mastery of the course material. Classes are supported by board-certified instructors and students have 24/7 access to the online learning platform. Coursework begins in one of eight high-growth, high-demand career fields, from child care and education to certified transportation, before progressing to the core academic subjects. Many students are able to graduate in as few as four to six months by transferring in previously earned high school credits.

For more information go to the library or www.pgcmls.info.

Early Greenbelt History Promoter Ebeneezer Howard

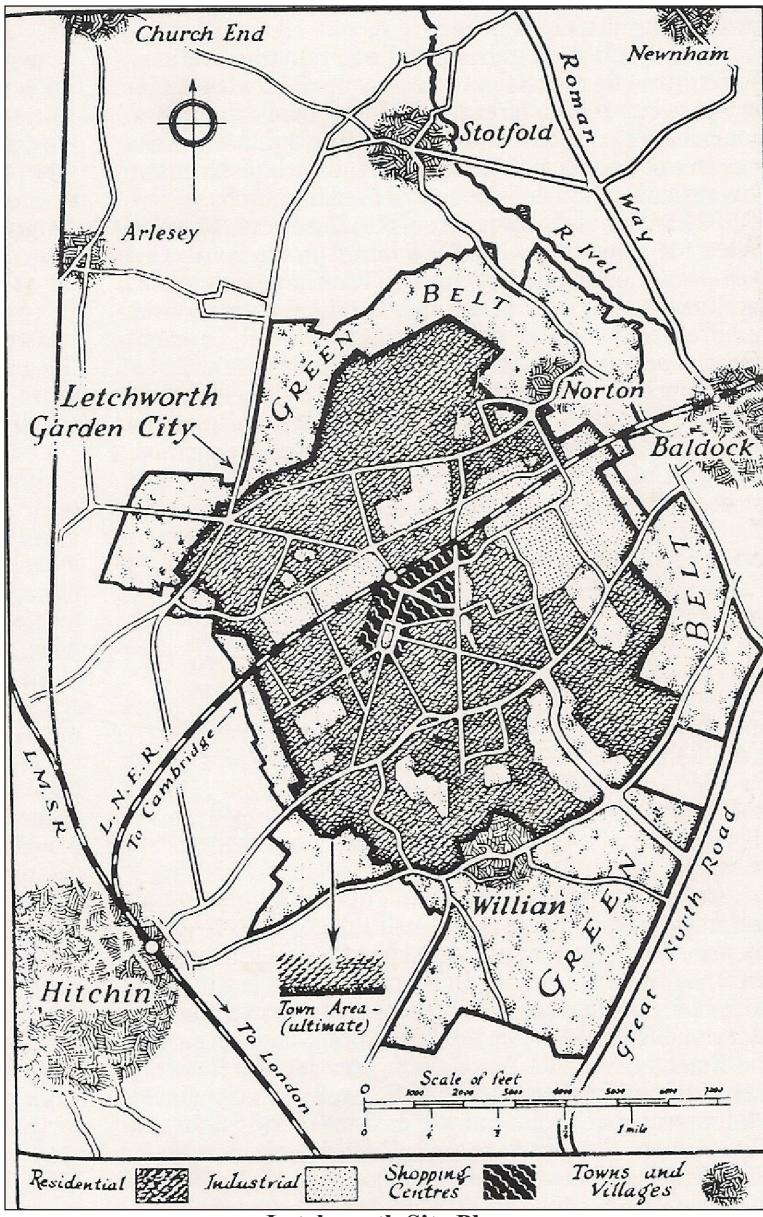

by James Giese

Ebeneezer Howard

A year from now Greenbelt will be celebrating its 80th anniversary. This is the first of a series of historic photograph presentations to help tell the story of Greenbelt's early history. The photos in this story are from the Library of Congress Greenbelt Project files and Greenbelt: History of a New Town, 1937-87.

Ebeneezer Howard promoted the English Garden City Movement in England with his book published in 1898 and then successfully built three garden cities. The drawing below is the site plan for Letchworth, his first. Note the core commercial area centered on a railroad station encircled by housing and bordered by a green belt. The garden cities were an inspiration to Americans to build such communities in this country, which led to the construction of Greenbelt and its two sister cities, Green Hills, Ohio, and Greendale, Wisc.

Wednesday Races Dominate Park

by Susan Harris from her blog Greenbelt Live

No, this isn't a scene from the outskirts of Rio. These are local racers, but that doesn't mean they're not serious about the sport, or so I gathered from watching and talking with family members and other race-followers and supporters.

In fact, these weekly races in Greenbelt Park are the only sanctioned bike races in the D.C. area on weekdays, so they attract riders from several local groups, in addition to the team that's in charge of this event – Route 1 Velo, sponsored by Arrow Bicycle in Hyattsville.

Promoter Jeff Travis (a Greenbelter) tells me these "great practice races" have been hosted by Greenbelt for 33 years now.

Windsor Green Elects Board

The results of the June 20, 2016 Windsor Green Homeowners Association election are as follows:

Catherine Terry-Cursor, president; Randall Evans, 1st vice president; Vicki Focht, 2nd vice president; Robin Burts, treasurer; and Derek Thompson, secretary.

Board meetings are held monthly at the Windsor Green Community Building (7474 Frankfort Drive, Greenbelt, MD 20770). Owners and residents are encouraged to attend. The board meets on the third Monday of the month at 7:30 p.m.

"Practice" doesn't mean casual, though, as you can see from these photos or by reading about the races on the park's website: "It's a Tour de France style type of race where the competitive juices flow."

More seriousness is evident on the Route 1 Velo website: there are complicated rules, officially reported standings and many FAQs for newcomers.

The races have been taking place from 6 to 8 p.m. every Wednesday during the racing season but there are just two more this summer, in case you'd like to catch them.
